Did You Know . . .

The first drinking chocolate is believed to have been created by the Aztecs around 2,000 years ago and became an essential part of their culture.

According to Larousse Gastronomique, ganache was invented in a pâtisserie specialty bakery in Paris in the 1850s.

Legend says the chocolate truffle was created in the kitchen of French culinary giant Auguste Escoffier in the 1920s during a botched attempt to make pastry cream. As it began to harden, he rolled it into a lumpy ball, covered it with cocoa butter and was struck by its resemblance to the luxurious truffle.
